Statement of Significance

Last updated on - April 28, 2005

A house containing one of the most complete and elegant decorative schemes of the 1880s, partly obscured but almost all apparently recoverable. This work, done by Patterson Brothers of Melbourne in 1883-4 for William Greenlaw, general manager of the Colonial Bank of Australasia, is characterised by rich and delicate schemes of painting and stencilling, extending even to the decorated skirtings, and by the absence of wallpaper. The original house, thought to date from before 1863, is incorporated within the present structure.
