Statement of Significance

Last updated on - February 2, 1998

Statement of Significance

Keiglo is of historical and architectural significance to the region and the City of Brimbank as a rare elaborate late nineteenth century house reflecting the status and ambition of A.H. Padley as the principal of the Cosmopolitan Land and Banking Company, and the instigator of the original subdivision and development of the St.Albans suburb. The landscape setting is important to the heritage value of the dwelling.

Physical Description 1

Description

Residual large weatherboarded and verandahed house of asymmetrical plan at front comprising projecting rooms. Formerly with cast-iron roof look-out, altered with new roof tiles, stone grotto and other additions. The remnant garden includes stone pines, Monterey cypress, Moreton Bay fig, and sugar gum. The house is now part of a later Roman Catholic complex, having been reused as a presbytery.
