Statement of Significance

Last updated on - July 31, 2004

The Uniting Church building, 14 Newall Street, Marnoo, although relocated to the site, makes a contribution to the predominantly single storey, horizontal weatherboard streetscape of galvanised corrugated iron pitched roof buildings.

The Uniting Church building, 14 Newall Street, is architecturally significant at a LOCAL level. Although altered, it demonstrates original design qualities of a restrained mid 20th century Gothic style. These qualities include the shallow pitched gable roof form, together with stepped, wider gable roofs at the rear and a steeper pitched porch gable at the side. Other intact or appropriate qualities include the galvanised corrugated iron roof cladding, single storey height, wide eaves, tripled lighted timber framed pointed windows with decorative leadlighting, series of side timber framed double hung windows, and the double timber and glazed door opening under the rear side porch. The garden setting also contributes to the significance of the place.

The Uniting Church building, 14 Newall Street, is socially significant at a LOCAL level. It is recognised and valued by the Marnoo community for religious reasons.

Overall, the Uniting Church building, 14 Newall Street, is of LOCAL significance.

Physical Description 1

The Uniting Church building, 14 Newall Street, Marnoo, has visual connections with other predominantly single storey, horizontal weatherboard residential and commercial buildings with pitched galvanised corrugated iron roofs. This building is generally in accord with the form and construction of the significant places visually connected to it. It is set on a larger sized allotment for the area and has a garden setting of mature shrubs, trees and a concrete driveway.

The single storey, restrained mid 20th century Gothic styled Uniting Church building is characterised by a shallow pitched gable roof form, together with stepped, wider gable roofs at the rear and a steeper pitched porch gable at the side. These roof forms are clad in galvanised corrugated iron. Wide overhangs are features of the eaves.

A change to the significant fabric has been the recladding of the original horizontal weatherboard walls with recent non-timber horizontal wall cladding.

At the front is are early triple lighted, timber framed pointed windows with decorative leadlighting. The side porch is supported by a series of rudimentary timber posts.

At the side are a series of early timber framed double hung windows. The double timber and glazed door opening under a rear side porch also appears to be early.
