Interpretation of Site	No structures in this location until later period when tanneries expanded between 1910 and 1952. May be associated with the buildings shown in a 1952 historical photo.
Archaeological Significance	Due to the presence of the intact remains, it is highly likely that further intact structured remains and associated occupation deposits will be preserved here.
Historical Significance	Hallenstein Tannery stood here from the mid 19th Century and expanded significantly between 1910 and 1952. Hallenstein tannery is an important early industry representing the noxious industries for which Footscray became well known.
