Interpretation of Site	Residential house possibly built to accommodate the workforce for the tannery
Historical Significance	Mid 19th Century residence superceded by an early 20th Century warehouse associated with a tannery, located within a residential and industrial precinct on the Maribynnong river in Footscray. Associated with important historical developements for Footscray.
Archaeological Significance	Currently an open plan warehouse stands in this lacion. Given there were two earlier phases of developement here, it is moderately likely that intact structural remains and associated desposits remain here below ground.
