Statement of Significance

Last updated on - October 26, 2002

Moderate significance, possibly one of only two surviving sites capable of revealing evidence of 1800s Chinese fishing and fish curing activities.

Interpretation of Site	Possibly site where Chinese people lived, fished, cured fish, mended and dried nets, etc. [22/8/3] dug trenches may represent a system for smoke from a fire before releasing it into a smokerroom. The post stumps represent a jetty. The imported rock was probably part of a foundation or hearth. At present the lime deposit represents an unknown factor.
