Statement of Significance

Last updated on - December 2, 2003

SoS from 2000 Heritage Study and 2003 Heritage Review:

Recommended level of significance: local

The Tullamarine war memorial is of local historical significance as one of the few surviving features which relate to the original rural village of Tullamarine and one of the few early twentieth century structures in the area. It also demonstrates (as do all such local memorials) the very high level of volunteerism from such small communities and commemorates both the individuals who served in the war and through them also records the names of most of the families which once resided in the district.

Physical Description 1

A typical granite obelisk form of War Memorial located at the corner of Dalkeith Avenue and Broadmeadows Road, next to the Tullamarine Primary School.

The memorial is formed of three main sections with bluestone base and plinth, surmounted is a polished granite shaft, inscribed on three sides with the names of local men who served in the First World War, and on the fourth with the above dedication.

See 2000 citation

Integrity

In good condition, and intact although the safety fence on the corner, (to protect school children from traffic), visually detracts from its appreciation

Veterans Description for Public

The Tullamarine War Memorial is located on the corner of Dalkeith Avenue and Broadmeadows Road, next to the Tullamarine Primary School. The memorial comprises of a granite obelisk and is dedicated to the First World War. During the First World War, the Tullamarine district sent a relatively large number of young men to fight. The memorial is formed of three main sections with bluestone base and plinth surmounted by a polished granite shaft. Inscribed on three sides are the names of local men who served in the First World War, and on the fourth with the dedication reads: "Erected By The Residents of Tullamarine In Honour of The Men Of The District."
