Physical Description 1

DESCRIPTION

A reinforced concrete, cantilevered panel, freeform lookout with a roughcast finish to the vertical faces and a cantilevered wrought iron balustrade. In his first book Victorian Modern, 1947, the young Robin Boyd eulogises "High above the Barwon River Planes", where the road twists at the deviation, a double mushroom by Buchan, Laird and Buchan in 1938 sprouts for a lookout and a Geelong showplace.

The first floor has inset coloured concrete, defined by brass edge strips as a compass motif. Mussolin-like, the Roman cypresses form an appropriate backdrop.
