Physical Description 1

A two-storey Georgian Revival red brick house, two-storey timber verandah to facade, Marseille tile roof (hipped)

Recent carport on side of house built to imitate original details

Physical Description 2

The former stables at the rear of 14 Sorrett Avenue is a Victorian double-storey bichrome brick building with a gabled slate roof. External walls are constructed of red brick with darker contrasting Hawthorn brick quoins and arched lintels. The roof has ornamental bargeboards and turned timber finials.

The building was not inspected in detail as part of this assessment, although recent photographs suggest that it remains substantially intact externally. Part of the north elevation is obscured by a modern addition to the house and some of the original door and window joinery was replaced in recent decades, albeit using reproduction joinery sympathetic to the early character of the building.
