Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 14, 2024

What is significant?

The area was first mapped as allotments 6 and 7 of Section C Main Road Ballarat in the 1857 Revised Town Plan of Main Street. The site is within Ballarat's first commercial precinct and between two of the first alluvial gold fields mined in the initial rush. The site is significant as an initial gold rush commercial residential site and will provide archaeological information about the occupation of high turnover premises during this time.

How is it significant?

The site is of historical and archaeological significance.

Why is it significant?

The site is of historical significance as the location of an early residence and commercial precinct during the years of the Victorian gold rush – one of the most significant rushes in world history. The site is of archaeological significance due to its potential to contain artefacts, deposits and features that relate to the establishment of commercial operations in the gold rush, and other later 19th century activities.
