Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

The house at no. 113 McCracken Street, Essendon, was built for George Bohn in 1924. It is aesthetically important (Criterion E) as a highly successful Arts and Crafts design exploiting the popular Bungalow theme and using stylistic devices of the period including the single ridged attic villa form, curved window bays, attic floor balcony, window dormer and chalet roof, the links with English and American precedents being clearly evident.

Physical Description 1

A red brick Arts and Crafts bungalow with attic storey and dominant gable roof and gable end facing McCracken Street. The facade is symmetrically arranged with curved lower level window bays and a recessed porch with semi-circular arch. The attic storey is cement sheet clad with strapping in the gable end and there is a central balcony with a gently curved front, the verge being supported on curved brackets and the apex of the gable being filled with shingled weatherboards (?). Emphasis is given to the porch by means of brick buttresses and there is a curved window bay on the north side. Light and ventilation to the attic floor is provided by a skillion roof dormer in the manner of the period and there is a surmounting terra cotta dragon finial.

Integrity

Condition: Sound. Integrity: High, includes wire mesh fence and gates.
