Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

The Lamble orchard house is significant to the Cardinia Shire as a good and stylistically interesting Californian Bungalow design from the early development of orcharding in the district and adds greatly the variety of farm housing and gardens in the district. The house is closely linked with the locally prominent Lamble family and is a good demonstration of design skill on a modest scale.

Physical Description 1

This is a distinctive Californian Bungalow style weatherboarded farm house with shingled gables (porch and main roofs), a corrugated iron roof, and unusual Eastern-style flared window hoods. These hoods sit over boxed window bays and the shingles (timber or fibrous cement sheet) are stained/painted a Bungalow green typical of the era. Other window bays are further along the front of the house. There is a gabled entry porch supported on Greek revival fluted cement columns resting on red brick piers and the chimneys are of red brick with corbelled tops. There are traces of early planting around the house.

Physical Conditions

The house is externally near original but the fence may have been replaced.
