Statement of Significance

Last updated on - April 7, 2021

STATEMENT OF CULTURAL HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE:

The former Huntly Shire Council Chambers was constructed in 1867 as council chambers for the former shire of Huntly. The building was designed by local engineer, John O'Dwyer and constructed by builders, Hyett and Martin. The Huntly Shire was formed in July 1866 and the construction of a building in which they could hold meetings was a priority. The Council used the building for 110 years before a new chambers was opened in 1977, when the former chambers were leased to a local historical society for use as a museum.

The one storeyed face brick building has a double hipped roof, partially concealed by parapets on three sides. The design of the building conveys a strong Lombardic influence with banded brick quoining and a large open loggia on the entrance faade formed by double banded brick columns supporting semicircular arches. The building retains much of its early furniture and fittings, including the councillors' meeting table and chairs, a series of honour boards and a photographic collection of all Huntly Shire Council councillors.

The former Huntly Shire Chambers is of architectural importance to the State of Victoria.

The building is of architectural importance as an unusual example of an engineer designed council chambers with many interesting design elements, including the banded brickwork, overall scale of the building and loggia. The arcade on the eastern faade is a good example of fine engineered brickwork with two levels of arches. The building is substantially intact both internally and externally.

History

Contextual History:History of Place:

The former Huntly Shire Council Chambers were constructed in 1867 as the Council Chambers for the former Shire of Huntly which is now part of the City of Greater Bendigo. The building was designed by Shire Engineer, John O'Dwyer.

During the 1840s squatters drove cattle through what became the Huntly Shire and in 1845 the Burnewang Run was established by John and Robert Bakewell. The first land sales in the mid 1850s encouraged closer settlement and this was followed shortly after by the discovery of gold in the area. In 1860 the Campaspe District Roads Board was established as the precursor to the Huntly Shire Council which was formed on 18 July 1866.

One of the first decisions made by the Council was for the erection of Shire Council Chambers in which to hold meetings and house officers. The cost of the building was not to exceed £350 and was to 'be of brick and built as an addition to the building in which meetings were then held'. There is some debate as to what this may mean, whether the Shire Council Chambers was an addition to an existing structure or whether this simply meant providing additional space to that already used by the Council. The building does not display marked signs of having a large addition.

The Council commissioned the Shire Engineer, John O'Dwyer, to prepare plans for the building and it was constructed by builders, Hyett and Martin.

The Council used the Shire Chambers for 110 years, briefly shifting their meetings to Goornong following amalgamation in the 1880s, but soon shifting back to Huntly. The 1970s was a time of development for Huntly and with expansion of the council a move to a larger premises became necessary. In 1977 the new Shire Chambers were opened and the Huntly Historical Society were given the lease of the former Shire Chambers which they retain in 1997. The building is used as a museum.
