Statement of Significance

Last updated on - March 4, 2008

Designed by tenant architects Oakley and Parkes and built by 1931, Equity Chambers is a late addition to the exotic commercial styles prevalent in the late 1920's and said at the time to be Romanesque but displaying Byzantine characterisation. It is in near original condition and has been richly finished and detailed. It is distinguished among its contemporaries by its arcaded entry porch. It is also the headquarters of one of Victoria's longest established firms and has housed many distinguished members of the legal profession, a factor which is reflected by the high integrity of the interior.
