St Andrews School House, corner Church and St. Andrews Streets, Brighton, was commenced in 1856 and completed in 1886 to designs by Architect Charles Webb. The symmetrically planned building, with projecting end wings and central porch, is constructed in random coursed, locally quarried ironstone, re-used from the 1851 church. The roof is slate and stucco details include parapets and finials, angle buttresses, tudor doorway, window surroundings and gable vents.

St. Andrew's School House is a rare surviving example of a substantial early denominational school building. the use of local ironstone is almost unique. the building is one of the few surviving examples of Charles Webb's well detailed and distinctive institutional buildings. Early English Gothic revival in style, the structure is notable for details including the Tudour doorway and bell-cast tops to the finials.
