Statement of Significance

Last updated on - October 4, 2006

The two storey brick townhouse was erected in 1878 for Frederick Hewlitt, a medical practitioner. The rendered facade was once graced by a cantilevered first floor balcony with cast iron balustrade. This is a typical conservative classical style terrace with fine mouldings. The unusual cantilevered balcony gave the building a distinct character and appearance. It is nevertheless an essential part of the Carlton Street and Gardens precinct and a typical example of a building type which is a special feature of inner suburban Melbourne. The cast iron palisade fence is compatible with the house. The cantilevered first floor balcony has been removed. Classified: 19/06/1958
