Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 16, 2008

Location or Context: remnant native vegetation

The 36 acre block contains 6 ancient River Red Gums in the south west corner. The rest of the site has been cleared long ago and has been farmed and developed. There is a seventh tree just outside the fence on the roadside. The old trees together with those on the Nursery site are a good example of the open woodland that once covered much of Templestowe.
