Interpretation of Site

Heritage Inventory Interpretation: 123 artefacts were collected from this area and appear to be predominantly domestic in function (bottles, glassware) This was possibly a rubbish dump. The presence of the drain and the cluster of stones (which is not natural) suggests that there was a structure on this site. The bottle tops/necks and nails found at the site suggest a late nineteenth century date. No structure on this site appears on the plans of this area, perhaps indicating that it was insignificant and insubstantial.
