Statement of Significance

Last updated on - August 3, 2004

The house, 16 Newall Street, Marnoo, has significance as an example as an example of a transitional Federation and interwar Bungalow style.

The house, 16 Newall Street, Marnoo, is architecturally significant at a LOCAL level. Although altered from a house and shop, the house demonstrates some original and early design qualities of a transitional Federation and Interwar Bungalow style. These qualities include the complex roof forms, including the central gambrel and projecting broken back return verandah, and the recessive gabled and hipped roofs that project at the sides. Other intact or appropriate qualities include the asymmetrical composition, single storey height, green painted galvanised corrugated iron roof cladding, strapped cement sheet wall cladding, timber verandah columns with arched timber valences having curving timber fretwork, banks of timber framed windows and ridge decoration.

The house in Newall Street is historically significant at a LOCAL level. It is associated with commercial developments in Marnoo in the early 20th century.

Overall, the house, 16 Newall Street, Marnoo, is of LOCAL significance.

Physical Description 1

The house, 16 Newall Street, Marnoo, is set on a wide allotment, having a frontage comprising an open grassed area featuring some exotic trees.

The asymmetrical, single storey, strapped cement sheet, transitional Federation and interwar Bungalow styled house is characterised by complex roof forms including a central gambrel and projecting broken back return verandah, and rear gabled and hipped roof forms that project to the sides. These roof forms are clad in green painted galvanised corrugated iron and feature ridge decoration on the main central ridge line.

A feature of the design is the return verandah. It has timber verandah columns with arched timber valances having curving Art Nouveau fretwork typical of the Federation style.

Other features include the early banks of timber framed windows, with fixed central windows and flanking double hung windows, being typical of interwar Bungalow design.

The right side of the front verandah was the original shopfront that was altered when the house was altered to solely residential purposes in the 1970s.
