History

Heritage Inventory History of Site: The New Adventure tunnel and tail-race was cut by Griffiths and party, through a high rocky bluff known as Frenchman's Hill, on Livingstone Creek opposite Omeo township, in 1868. By diverting the creek waters through their 'extensive' tunnel, the party was able to re-work a large section of the best part of the creek bed. In 1870 the New Adventure claim was in abeyance, but work re-started after it was bought by a Chinese party. Disastrous floods in 1871 levelled most of the creek claims, but the damage was repaired and the New Adventure was the premier alluvial ground on Livingstone Creek in 1872. No further reference was found to the New Adventure claim and tunnel, but large-scale sluicing operations on Livingstone Creek continued until early this century.
