Physical Description 1

The house at 53B Ligar Street, Stawell, is set on an average sized allotment for the area. The surrounds comprise perimeter garden beds, large exotic tree and some small grassed areas. There is a modest front setback and wide side setbacks, with the front bound by an introduced open horizontal timber paling fence.

The single storey, rendered, Victorian styled house is characterised by a hipped roof form, together with a hipped verandah that projects towards the street frontage. There is also a rear hipped roof form. These roofs are clad in dark painted galvanised corrugated iron. Early rendered chimneys adorn the roofline, while narrow overhangs and front timber brackets are features of the eaves.

The most substantial change to the house is noted on the front verandah. It is supported by introduced columns and has introduced screening at the front and side, together with an introduced curving timber valance.

Early features of the design include the timber framed multi paned double hung windows.
