Statement of Significance

Last updated on - August 27, 2004

The Former Stawell Coach Factory, 6 Scotland Place has significance as a reasonably externally intact and rare surviving example of a large Victorian styled Coach factory building in Stawell. Possibly built in the second half of the 19th century, the building appears to be in fair condition when viewed from the street.

The Former Stawell Coach Factory, 6 Scotland Place is historically and architecturally significant at a LOCAL level. It is associated with residential and commercial developments in Stawell during the second half of the 19th century, and it demonstrates some original design qualities of a Victorian style. These qualities include the simple gable roof form that traverses the site, together with the single timber framed double hung ground and first floor windows with shallow-arched heads accentuated by brick voussoirs (having recent overpainting). Other intact or appropriate qualities include the galvanised corrugated iron roof cladding, brick wall construction (recently overpainted), and the large central ground floor door opening. It is associated with Mr. John Stabb who worked in and owned the wheelwright and coachbuilding works from 1874 until 1923.

Overall, the Former Stawell Coach Factory, 6 Scotland Place is of LOCAL significance.

Physical Description 1

The former Former Stawell Coach Factory, 6 Scotland Place, Stawell, is set on the front (street) boundary and takes up most of the front section of the site.

The two storey, painted brick, Victorian styled building is characterised by a simple gable roof form that traverses the site, together with an introduced glazed gabled section at one end. The original roof form is clad in galvanised corrugated iron.

Early features of the design include the single, timber framed double hung ground and first windows with shallow arched heads accentuated by the painted brick voussoirs. The central ground floor door opening is introduced with introduced doors. The large shopfront windows flanking the central doorway have been introduced.
