Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

The substantial single storey residence, 53 Gawler Street was erected in 1912 for Dr. J.H. Sleeman as his residence and surgery. The architect/contractor was David Evrey. The house epitomizes California Bungalow design with its wide verandahs and eaves and low slung gable roofs. The small timber beams supporting the overhanging eaves, chimneys and fine leadlight glass are fine and complementary features. The house is unique in Portland and a fine example of its style.
