Physical Description 1

The house known as 'Carinya' at 25 Shirreff Street, Stawell, has a rudimentary garden setting comprising open grassed areas, some roses at the front and side trees. The front is bound by a timber picket fence that is approximately 1200 mm high.

The symmetrical, single storey, horizontal timber weatherboard, Victorian styled house is characterised by a hipped roof form, together with a hipped ogee form verandah that projects towards the street frontage. These roof forms are clad in galvanised corrugated iron. Two early brick chimneys (now painted) with multi-corbelled tops adorn the roofline. Narrow overhangs with paired timber brackets, paterae and panelling are features of the eaves.

An early feature of the design is the front verandah. It is supported by square timber columns with projecting capitals and has decorative cast iron brackets and valances. The concrete verandah floor has been introduced.

Other early features of the design include the central timber framed front doorway with sidelights and highlights, and the flanking timber framed double hung windows.
