Statement of Significance

Last updated on - August 27, 2004

The house at 19 Sloane Street, Stawell, makes a significant architectural and visual contribution to the predominantly late 19th and early 20th century residential area. It is significant at a CONTRIBUTORY level, being associated with residential developments in Stawell in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, and it demonstrates some remnant and appropriate design qualities of an interwar English Domestic Revival style. These qualities include the asymmetrical composition, single storey height, hipped roof form that traverses the site and the hipped roof and bullnosed verandah that project towards the street frontage, lapped galvanised corrugated iron roof cladding, horizontal timber weatherboard wall cladding, painted and strapped brick chimneys with corbelled tops, narrow eaves with timber brackets, panelling and paterae, timber framed double hung windows (including the tripartite window on the projecting hipped roof), and the timber framed doorway with sidelights and highlight.
