Interpretation of Site	The occupation of the site represents several historical development themes including, settlement, mining, transport and early 20th century developemtns of the area.
Archaeological Significance	Given 63 years of occupation of the site, from 1872 until 1935, there isa high potential for stratified archaeological deposits in the vicinity of the well and former buildings. These deposits may have been impacted by farming activities but could offer some insights into the former history of the site.
Historical Significance	The site is historically significant for its association with historical themes such as the early development of Yarra Glen, the goldfields and transport.
