Physical Description 1

The Stawell racetrack is a large flat grassed area south of the township. Surrounding the open racetrack area are stands of pines and eucalypts.

The area contains structures associated with racing such as stables and yarding, most of which appear to date from the late 20th century. The higher judges box is a utilitarian late 20th century structure which rises above a lower earlier viewing platform. This lower two storey structure appears to date from the interwar years and is of face brick and render. The corners are expressed as engaged piers and the panels have a central elongated cross shape for decoration. The flat roof appears to be a later addition. The upper level is accessed by an introduced metal stairway. The viewing pavilion is at the front of a simple face brick single storey building which appears to have been extended in rendered masonry to the rear. The building has a hipped roof with relatively deep eaves. The window heads are marked in render/concrete and the windows are marked into smaller panes with glazing bars.
