Interpretation of Site	It is possible that the early buildings marked on Coxs 1864 plan represent the tannery, certainly the MMBW 1894 plan confirms that the tannery stood here and comprised a number (12) of structures.
Archaeological Significance	Currently, there are disused partly demolished warehouse structures across the site. Concrete floors. As such, it is moderately likely that archaeological features remain below the ground.
Historical Significance	Cleghorn tannery associated with the neighbouring Hallowstein Tannery. Operated from 1860's. Important early industry in Footscray. Noxious industry on Maribynong gradually phased out in the modern era.
