Physical Description 1

The house is double-fronted, clad with weatherboards and fronted with a hipped bullnose roof verandah. The main roof is an M-hip and like the verandah is of corrugated iron. Fretted timber brackets decorate the capitals of the turned verandah posts but otherwise the house is relatively plain. The original picket fence and gate remain as does the ogee-profile spouting. What is probably a mirror plant (Coprosma repens) hedge has overgrown its intended shape.

Physical Description 2

Extract from the 2009 study

No. 13 Flinders Street is a single-storey, double-fronted late Victorian weatherboard house with a hipped roof clad in corrugated galvanised steel. A verandah with turned timber posts and a hipped bullnose roof extends across the street-facing elevation. The central door is flanked by double-hung sash windows. There is a rendered brick chimney with a classically-inspired moulding at its top.

The house is set back from Flinders Street within a mature garden, including a large peppercorn tree, which extends along the east of the house.
