Statement of Significance

Last updated on - November 1, 2009

Statement of Significance as recorded under the Queenscliff Heritage Study 2009

The Norfolk Island Pine at 35 Beach Street, Queenscliff is of historic significance as one of a number of large Norfolk Island pines within the Borough of Queenscliffe. The tree is also of aesthetic significance as one of a number of specimens which help define the character of Queenscliff, having a strong maritime association and being a dominant feature of the skyline.

Extract from the 2009 study

The Norfolk Island pine at 35 Beach Street is a very large specimen. Compared to other large specimens in Queenscliff, it is in poor condition. This is partially the result of pruning for power line clearance. The pruning also reduces the tree's amenity value. The tree may recover if the power lines are relocated and the pruning ceases. The tree is approximately 23.5m high and 9m wide.
