Physical Description 1

These are two similar small rectangular sheds with light steel frame, vertical cgi wall cladding and cgi gable roof with wide eaves supported by distinctive diagonal angle-iron braces. There are hinged double-doors at one end, and a smaller personnel door at the other end. There are numerous window-like openings, but covered with top-hinged ripple-iron steel flaps. They look like WW2 vintage, and Hyder said they were built c1942. Army Nos.375 & 386.

Physical Conditions

Shed No.375 (near the Museum Annex) looks well maintained and in good condition. No.386 (near Ground Maintenance Office/Workshop) is in only fair condition with some rusty wall cladding, particularly where the cgi sheets touch the ground.

Veterans Description for Public

The Bandiana Storehouse (Army Nos. 375 & 386) are small rectangular sheds with light steel frame, vertical cgi wall cladding and cgi gable roof with wide eaves supported by distinctive diagonal angle-iron braces. There are hinged double-doors at one end, and a smaller personnel door at the other end. There are numerous window-like openings, but covered with top-hinged ripple-iron steel flaps. They look like Second World War vintage, and are said to have been built c.1942.
