Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Complex is representative of continued occupation of this land by the Wucatsch family from 1853 until the 1960s. House dates to soldier settlement scheme post-WWI, while walls date to earlier occupation c. 1850s. Locally significant.

Interpretation of Site	Drystone walls are part of the original complex which surrounded allotment 3 of section 9, built in the 19th-c. The southern boundary wall was erected in the early to mid 20th-c when the northern part of the allotment was purchased by SD Wuchatsch. Most of the house and sheds also date to this period. The well has been covered by a small shed but the original well probably dates to the mid-late 20th-c. Wuchatsch (1985) states that these wells were common practice in the Epping area.
Archaeological Significance	Site has potential to contain significant historical archaeological artefacts and deposits.
