Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Hehr's Pine Park Farm illustrates early German building practices the manner of which the resources of the new land were put to use and both the dairy and horse breeding industries. The latter providing an essential product for farms throughout the district. It is historically significant on a regional level for all of these aspects and architectural significance on a state level for remarkable intactness and the structures are related to the activities of the dairy and horse breeding farms. (Gould 1991 1:19)

Interpretation of Site The milking shed/dairy relates to the late 19th century dairy farm on the property. The timber stalls, feeding boxes, bluestone flooring, drainage channels, and drystone wall pens relate to the 20th century Clydesdale stud and farm.
