Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

This ruinous structure, probably erected in the 1860s, is of architectural, historic and scientific significance to the Green Gully district.

The use of stone is notable. It indicates the early settlement of land in the area for agricultural and mining purposes. It is important for its potential to provide information that contributes to a greater understanding of the history of the settlement and establishment of the district. The site has a strong presumption of archaeological research potential. Further historical research and archaeological investigation is recommended.
