Statement of Significance

Last updated on - May 12, 2006

Site appears to preserve some intact features and deposits associated with a nineteenth century stables and dairy that provides information on rural occupations of the area. Some stone imported from local sources. The archaeology can provide information on the intensity and scope of rural settlement in this area.

See Archaeological Report 3070 regarding consent C0479

Interpretation of Site	Site appears to be a fairly large dairy and stables complex with extensive cobbling (granite and silcrete) some of which may have formed an access road. Foundations of a building with one course of unprepared granite remaining - some wall alignments completed robbed. Some patches of crushed brick (bricks not machine made) and 19c artefact deposits. Preliminary interpretation suggests that the site abandoned by early 20c at latest and probably relates to early rural occupation in this area.
