Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Part of the Central Park Shopping Centre Precinct

The Central Park shops were established to cater mainly for the needs of local residents in this rapidly developing East Malvern area, but also for visitors to Central Park. The Wattletree Road tram had a direct impact on the development of the area, and in particular the establishment of the shops.

The Central Park shops are of social significance as they play an important role in the community and in their relationship to the adjacent tram line and Central Park. In their context, they illustrate the typical early twentieth century interdependence between the development of suburban housing, recreation facilities, public transport and the smaller shopping strip.

The precinct is important for the degree to which it retains its building stock, scale and general character from the 1910s, 1920s and 1930s, undiluted by more recent development. It is a fine and representative exemplar of typical suburban commercial properties of these decades. The location of the precinct, intermediate between Central Park and the Gascoigne, Ranfurly, Hedgeley Dene and Valentine Estates, adds to its importance, and renders it crucial to an appreciation of the development of these significant contingent areas.

Physical Description 1

"This property is part of asymmetrical pair of two-storey, red brick shops and is noteworthy for its ornamental details realised in unpainted cement render. Each shop is defined by oversized, rendered pilasters which rise to form part of a massive parapet. Rendered brackets support heavy ornamental awnings, above the first floor windows. The shop front at No 149 appears to be substantially original although its partner at 151 has been extensively modified."

Shopfront

Intact elements: Metal frames to double shopfront (overpainted), highlights obscured by new verandah.
