STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Former Craigleith is a timber Edwardian house built in 1910-11, with some apparently Californian Bungalow elements. It has local architectural significance, despite reduced value due to alterations, as characteristic of this style and historical significance as a representative embodiment of life in Newtown before the Great War.

Physical Description 1

An elevated, double-fronted, timber house, transitional between Edwardian and Californian Bungalow. It has a gable-roof facing, with right and left side rear bays projecting and a verandah under the main roof, ogee brackets and is supported on Doric square post pairs on brick piers. Chimneys have brick mouldings and terra-cotta pots.

This place/object may be included in the Victorian Heritage Register pursuant to the Heritage Act 2017. Check the Victorian Heritage Database, selecting 'Heritage Victoria' as the place source.
