Physical Description 1

Description

A triple-fronted timber house apparently Edwardian, but actually built 35 years earlier. It has a complex hipped roof. The verandah is under this and returns to a gable at right. At front is a second hip at left side rear which the verandah posts appear to support. There are Venetian chimneys in dark brown brick with terra-cotta pots and a canted bay window under the verandah at left front. The verandah posts are deeply turned. Entry is at centre of the left side. Upper gables are roughcast pattern pressed metal and timbered.
