DESCRIPTION:

A generally near-symmetrical, large double-fronted late Italianate timber house, with a slate hipped roof. Unusually, the entrance is to the right side of the front. There is wing projecting rear side lift. The verandah extends across the front and returns at left. A t right front is an unusually gable-roofed belvedere.

Chimneys have Classical moulds rendered. Eaves have a shield motif valance ogee brackets and panels between, with some turned drops. Windows a left side have unusual small hoods of the shield valance. At right are two windows hoods, palisade with fretwork covered brackets. There is an Edwardian leadlight rectangular bay at centre front. The entrance has leadlight side and fanlights and unusually, additional lead lighting windows beside these, with a four-panelled door.

There is a bluestone base, an early gable-roofed garage, with a skillion addition and other outbuildings at right with gabled vents. The fence is palisade picket with spear-heads, vehicular and pedestrian gates are chainlink on piped frame. On the right boundary is a hedge.
