Physical Description 1

The single storey timber house is clad in weatherboards and the concave verandah and hipped roof are clad in corrugated iron. There is a central front door and double-hung window on either side. There is a rendered chimney towards the west side of the house. Of particular interest is the decorative timber fretwork valance on the verandah. It is very, very similar to a verandah valance on a house on the west side of Fenwick Street, Geelong, (between the Gordon Institute and Ryrie Street). Overall the design of the building is conservative for its period of construction.
