Outstanding size
Aesthetic significance
Outstanding example of species

The Sugar Gum (Eucalyptus cladocalyx) located in the south-west corner of the garden makes an aesthetic contribution to this culturally, historically and architecturally significant residence and 1940s arboretum-style garden. It was planted circa 1941 to the south of the residence creating a broad green backdrop for the residence and its high rounded canopy accentuates the curves of Arthur Pretty's 1940 Moderne inspired architecture of the residence. This specimen is notable as a prime example of the species due to its great canopy spread-girth-height ratio. It also represents an important Australian element of a historic planting style found in rural/country-style homesteads in Victoria.

On Saturday 24 November 2012, the tree dropped a major lateral limb on the east-west canopy axis, reducing its spread to 28 metres.
