STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The former London Chartered Bank, erected in 1859, is a two storey structure with basement, using squared basalt for the carcass and ashlar Barrabool sandstone for the facade and parapets. This bank is an important example of a mid nineteenth century bank, in intact condition and appropriately and typically designed in the Renaissance Revival style. The finely detailed structure is one of the most distinguished of the large group of bank buildings designed by noted Victorian architect Leonard Terry. The London chartered Bank was established in Geelong at a time of great prosperity and reflects the influence of the gold rush and the wool boom upon this settlement
