Statement of Cultural Significance

The shop and house at 2-4 Maud Street, Geelong, has significance as reasonably intact examples of late 19th century and interwar design. The shop building was constructed between 1893 and 1896 for Jacob Cairns, a plumber of Newtown. The interwar Californian Bungalow styled house was built in 1928, when the property was owned by Sarah and George Clarke.

The shop and house at 2-4 Maud Street are architecturally significant at a LOCAL level. The shop building demonstrates original design qualities of the late 1890s period. These qualities include the stepped and curvilinear parapet with a simple gable roof form behind, galvanised corrugated iron roof cladding (painted red) and the horizontal weatherboard wall cladding. Other intact or appropriate qualities include the single storey height, narrow eaves, and the two-bayed front facade divided by three plain pilasters with narrow-moulded capitals, timber framed, triple-lighted shopfront, and the narrow-bayed timber framed doorway with transom window above.

The house demonstrates original design qualities of an interwar Californian Bungalow style. These qualities include the broad gable roof form, together with a recessed corner verandah supported by paired twisted columns on an unpainted brick pier having a concrete capping. Other intact or appropriate qualities include the asymmetrical composition, single storey height, galvanised corrugated iron roof cladding (painted red), horizontal weatherboard wall cladding, two unpainted red brick chimneys, projecting bay of timber framed windows on the front facade having a flat hood supported by timber brackets, other timber framed windows, curved gable bargeboards, timber shingling above the verandah, and the decorative gable infill (battening and panelling).

The shop and house at 2-4 Maud Street are historically significant at a LOCAL level. The shop is associated with commercial developments in Geelong in the 1890s, and has particularly associations with Jacob Cairns, plumber and original owner between 1893 and 1896. The house (together with the shop) have associations with Sarah and George Clarke from 1928, when the house was constructed.

Overall, the shop and house at 2-4 Maud Street are of LOCAL significance.

Description

The shop and house at 2-4 Maud Street, Geelong, are set a contextually wide allotment for the local area. The timber shop building abuts the front boundary, but there is a modest setback for the house, which consists of a small front garden. The front is bound by an earlier capped timber picket fence, approximately 1200 mm high.

The single storey, horizontal weatherboard, rudimentary designed shop building is characterised by a stepped and curvilinear parapet with a simple gable roof form behind. This roof form is clad in galvanised corrugated iron painted red. Narrow overhangs are features of the eaves. The front facade of the shop building consists of two bays divided by three plain pilasters with narrow-moulded capitals. The wider bay has a timber framed, triple-lighted shopfront which appears to be partially boarded up about the lower section. The side narrow bay has an early timber doorway with altered timber door and blocked up transom window above.

The single storey, asymmetrical, horizontal weatherboard, interwar Californian Bungalow styled house is characterised by a broad gable roof form, together with a recessed corner verandah supported by paired twisted columns on an unpainted brick pier having a concrete capping. The gable roof is clad in galvanised corrugated iron painted red, and there are wide eaves. Two unpainted red brick chimneys adorn the roofline.

At the front is a projecting bay of timber framed windows with a flat hood above supported by timber brackets, and a small timber framed window. The other timber framed windows on the building also appear to be early.

Early decorative features of the design include the curved gable bargeboards, timber shingling above the verandah, and the gable infill (battening and panelling)..
