STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The former Flinders national School was erected in 1857 to the design of celebrated Geelong firm of architects Backhouse and Reynolds. Styled in the innovative Italianate mode and constructed with a dominant central tower, this cement rendered masonry structure has significant associations with early development of education in Geelong. The second headmaster, G. P. Morrison later established the Geelong College. Matthew Flinders Girls School survives as an important work of Backhouse and Reynolds and one of the finest of the early national Schools in Victoria, although the original building has been concealed by subsequent sympathetic alterations.
