STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Architecturally related to the larger revival projects grouped around the Moorabool-Malop Streets' corner, the building's classical stylism makes it in harmony with both conservative contemporary commercial architecture and the 19th century designs beside it. It also possesses elegant fenestration and carved stone details.

Historically, it represents well the crafts of its first owners, the incised building name being a lasting reminder of the group's existence.

Physical Description 1

Reputedly not precisely as the architects drew it, the new elevation is nevertheless a successful and complete transformation of the previous facade. Divided into three bays, the upper level is distinguished by use of the Serlian (or Palladian) motif, coupled with stylised pilasters. The use of sandstone and classical revival motifs lends the facade an ancient character, which belies its actual age. The building name, incised Roman style into the cornice marking, adds to this imagery. Presumably, pre-existing facade construction has determined the deep but blank parapet entablature.

It compares with contemporary Geelong classical revival designs such as the C.M.L., N.B.A and N.M.L. buildings, all grouped around the Moorabool and Malop Streets' corner. The cantilever verandah appears original, if reclad.
