METAL STORKS

The bronze storks now located in the Geelong Botanical Gardens were originally situated in the gardens of St Albans Homestead in Whittington, the stud property erected for James Wilson in 1873.

The storks are exquisite examples of the foundry man's craft and a great historical and aesthetic interest. The realistic storks

LATROBE PLAQUE

The Latrobe plaque commemorates the establishment of the Geelong Botanic Gardens in 1848 following the direction of the Superintendent of the Port Phillip District, Charles Joseph LaTrobe. The ornamental gardens were developed by noted botanist and horticulturalist, Daniel Bunce, and are of great heritage value in the Geelong region and the history of horticultural pursuits in Victoria.

THE FIRST CUSTOMS HOUSE

The First Customs House, a square plain timber structure built of timber studs with quirk bead, weatherboards and a thatch roof, was reputedly prefabricated in Sydney c1838 and shipped to Geelong. The first Customs House now located in the Botanic Garden in East Geelong, is claimed to be the oldest authenticated building still extant in Victoria. This picturesque gothic pavilion dates from the first four years of settlement at Port Phillip and is of paramount importance to the history of the foundations of the Port Phillip settlement and the development of customs and tariff protection in the infant colony. When the first permanent stone customs house was built in 1845, the timber pavilion was used for a short time as the telegraph Office

ROTUNDA EASTERN PARK

The somewhat emasculated and dilapidated rotunda in Eastern Park was originally sited in the Market Square, Geelong and functioned as a shelter pavilion. Designed by Percy Everett, the structure has a spherical roof in profile and octagonal plan platform. Much of the original ornamental detail has apparently been removed, possibly when the rotunda was relocated in Eastern Park in c1912. Everett designed a number of more notable pavilions in Geelong, the most important of which is the Hitchcock Bandstand in Johnston Park.

QUEEN VICTORIA STATUE - EASTERN GARDENS

The Statue of Queen Victoria, one of a large number which burgeoned throught the Colony after her death in 1901 is a fine example of figurative sculpture on a classical stone base. The casting in London of the sculpted effigy by J. Davie a Melbourne Sculptor reflects the nature of the foundry man's craft. The stature is historical significance as Geelong's mark of affection to their long serving Queen and a piece of fine statuary in the Eastern Gardens.
