C Listed - Local Significance

Bayview, a double gable farmhouse built in the 1890s has been continuously associated with the Brammer family.

It has historic and aesthetic value as an important representative example of a typical late nineteenth century farmhouse complete with established exotic and native trees and had a long set back from the road.

Both the building and its important setting have a high degree of integrity.

It is of LOCAL cultural significance.

Physical Description 1

The large rural site has several mature trees, including a huge Norfolk pine and a palm tree. The building is set back off the Portarlinton Road, with extensive foliage, and originally would have had an excellent view across Port Phillip Bay.

The double-fronted, late Victorian style house has a hipped and gable roof, clad in corrugated iron. It is a timber frame and weatherboard clad structure, with two projecting gables flanking a central verandah on the north elevation.

The north elevation gables have decorative timber bargeboards, finials and pendants with a timber frame, low-light double hung window in the centre.

The north elevation verandah has a separate corrugated iron clad roof, with turned timber posts and extensive cast iron lacework and brackets. The verandah features a gable entrance with the same cast iron decoration. The house has a central timber doorway, with a timber frame, double-hung window either side.

This place/object may be included in the Victorian Heritage Register pursuant to the Heritage Act 2017. Check the Victorian Heritage Database, selecting 'Heritage Victoria' as the place source.
