Physical Description 1

Two-storeyed and stuccoed, the house resembles at first glance a typical inner suburban Victorian row house. Earlier than most of this type in the metropolitan area, the use of cast-iron ornament and the gabled, parapeted form also distinguish it, particularly amongst its Williamstown contemporaries.

Edwardian row houses such as at 654 Canning Street, Carlton are more typically provided with gabled parapets and Jacobean pattern designs. Similar incised cement detail at this parapet and the surviving urns are further attributes.

The fence has been replaced and a visually dominant addition has been made to this house, covering the side wall and verandah end. The bluestone fence is not original.
