Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

The Avenue of Honour has been removed (2005). It was previously assessed to be:

Of local significance as a remnant of a War Memorial, typically planted after World War 1 at the approaches to Victorian country towns, celebrating each fallen soldier with a 'Tree of Life'.

Physical Description 1

In 1991, this avenue comprised single line of 13 Southern Mahogany Gums. All of the trees had been badly pollarded and required tree surgery to restore their form.

The trees were removed at an unknown date, probably as a result of road widening, and were not extant when the site was inspected in early 2005. A plaque in Zerbes Reserve gives the history of the Avenue.
