Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

What is significant?

The brick cottage located at 93 McConochie street is a simple, symmetrical single storey brick cottage located three blocks south of the main street of Coleraine. The cottage is a simple painted brick cottage with a skillion attached to the rear of the building. The low roofs are hipped with no eaves and a bull-nose verandah runs along the facade of the cottage, supported by simple timber posts with capitals. The cottage is in fair condition and retains a fair degree of integrity.

How is it significant?

The brick cottage at 93 McConochie Street is of historical significance to the township of Coleraine and the Southern Grampians Shire.

Why is it significant?

93 McConochie Street is of historical significance as a rare surviving example of early brick cottages in the residential area of Coleraine. It is one of three surviving examples of an early type of dwelling constructed by the first settlers. The use of locally manufactured bricks demonstrates an early industry and trade in the town. It is historically important for its associations with an early family in Coleraine, the Hutchins, who are still well represented within the township
